Admiration for bravery is a universal quality, and the story of yesterday's battle at the Charles Street park is a story of brave men-the Rourke family. It took brave men to juggle victory out of defeat. The way they suffered, dared and done will always be interesting. These things go to make the history of the great national game, much of it to be always unwritten. But the Rourkes are modest. They refuse to talk about themselves, and even hesitate to speak from the standpoint of a spectator for fear that they may be thought guilty of implied self-aggrandizement Such men as McVey, Secry, Munyun, Boyle Whitehill and Pedroes, each with a record for mighty deeds, say nothing of their personal exploits. Yet what is told of them thrills the heart with a fire that never

After lambasting the daylights out of the Quinces twice on the Fourth, the Rourker assembled at the park yesterday afternoon determined to break it off, and, oh my oh me! what a time they did have doing

At the commencement of the sixth the bulletin board showed nine runs for the Rourkes and five for the Andy Sommers mob. In their half of this memorable inthe Omahas added three more to their total which made it 12 to 5. But what did the Quinces do in their haif?

SOME PERSONAL REMARKS Mertes came up first. Mertes is imported and has a big blue turkey buzzard tattooed on his chest. He has a voice full of old door mats and an unabated forehead. He door mats and an unabated forehead. He wiped his nose on his sieeve and grasped his club and looked. He hit and the ball ripped its way through the ozone out over right field. Boxy was there and muffed the ball with remorseless celat.

And Mangan comes up.
Mangan is built like a sand hill farm, well laid out, and he stands at an angle of 45 degrees sou'east. He took the precaution when very young to run a barbed wire through his legs, and in drains, ditches and subways his frame is well supplied. He sags a triffe in the chest, but otherwise is up to the best standard of Quincy citizenship.

He hit the ball a resonant whang and two bags were his'n, the imported youth

Krehmeyer next toes the pan.

He used to live in Omaha, and is courageous enough to face a cast fron lion. He is very beautiful, and from the looks of his clothes his laundress has an easy time of it. While quite young Charlie got hold of an old tin lantern and ate the top of it. He fell very sick and they thought he would die, but he recovered and his parents still refuse to forgive him.

To show how well he was yesterday he placed his tree against one of the Deacon's rainbow curves and straightened it out like a chalk line. It hit the fence and netted a couple of pillows and another run. Mango came in.

Mango came in.

Right here Andy Sommers altitudinized the sphere and Paddy Boyle swallowed it when it came down. That made one out, but what did the Quinces care?

Jack Johnson, a cousin of Jasper's, was at the bat. I don't exactly know how to describe Jack's style, but it is eminently suited to the Deacon's best bent balls. He has a voluptuous form, is scarcely 40 years of age, entirely respectable and plain enough has a voluptuous form, is scarcely 40 years of age, entirely respectable and plain enough to be appreciated by the most fastidious. He had his hammer with him, and pounded out a single. Then Mike Johnson arrived. He is no relation to Jack, but looks enough like him to be his sister. Mike isn't much of a hitter when there are no pipes around. He pushed a little, hollow-eyed, thin-chested grounder down to Munyun, and Munyun, knowing the girls were in the grandstand, tried to stop it after turning three handsprings and one double somersault. Of course his effort was a dire-and dismal failure. Mike reached first, Bertchold was the next man to force himself upon the public. He is very graceful in his sleep, and weighs something like 140 pounds, without his feet.

He smashed the Deacon for a bag. Then Paddy Boyle enciesvored to tear the lights out of Broderick's grounder, but after wrestling with it collar and elbow rules for over a minute he gave it up. In the meantime Jack and Mike swarmed over the plate.

Captain Mac was now in a terrible humor, and he acted just like Patsey Tebeau used to when he had hydrophobia. He ate up all the grass in front of the west bleachers, together with a couple of sections of the intervening fence.

But the Quinces never winced. They simply shrugged their ears and went on chopping wood. chopping wood.

McGreavey now stepped up to the pan like a nalad queen, well soaped, approaching the bath tub. McGreavey has a long-walsted face, and means well. He hit a hard one out to old man Seery, and Emmett

That was two out, with Mertes, the imported, at the bat. This time he cracked out a nice one, and Paddy Boyle's second miscue spared Mangan's fair young life. Krehmeyer, the beautiful, tears off his second two-sacker, Mertes and Mango both tallying.

Then Sommers elevated one to Boyle, which he fearlessly tackled, held and the

At the beginning of the last inning the Rourkes were four runs in the rear, but they dain't seem to care a little bit, and when Kid Fear humped up his back for the last whack at Mr. Johnson Captain the last whack at Mr. Johnson Captain Mac implored him to paste it.

A large hush fell over the park when Paddy Boyle came out of his cage.

He toyed but a fleeting moment with Mr.

Deacon Whitehill at the bat.

Grand thought. The loftlest archangel that smites the sunbeam with superior luster can have no more enduring existence than the Deacon.

It has been the unanimous opinion heretofore when Whitey was at the bat that it would be better were he dead. The populace thought maybe in his own sphere he could do a world of good, but they did not hint that his sphere was a rolling mill. Still they thought that he should have located permanently in the rich, black corn lands of Illinois. They knew that there was no better farming land in the world.

But they have changed their minds now, and the stately suns that with systems for their diadems tread in gorgeous march.

On Seery's long fly to Broderick, Paddy Boyle romped home with the winning tally. The sky was now burning in the colors of the declining sun. The great, fleecy clouds had been streaming toward the west all the afternoon, but now reared them-

The match was arranged to last twelve rounds, but in the fourth Robbins gave Middleton a terrific blow on the jaw, and the contest was immediately over, as Middleton went down like a shot and was unable to respond within the fatal count of ten.

The first round was uneventful, each man seeming disposed to take the other's meas-

The first round was uneventful, each man seeming disposed to take the other's measure. The second was a slasher. Robbins sent Middleton to the floor with a stiff right hander early in the round, and repeated the performance twice before the call of time, in addition to landing a half dozen other telling blows.

The third was a repetition of the second, Robbins having all the advantage and administering considerable punishment.

The fatal fourth had hardly commenced when Robbins chased Middleton into a corner and sent the little Briton to the floor with a well delivered punch. Middleton arose, but a jolt on the jaw came in an instant and the contest was over.

Middleton was clearly outclassed and at no time did he ever stand a chance to win. The difference in the weight of the men, some fifteen pounds, was in Robbins' favor. The winner's friends are severalized.

It is claimed by the strikers that the telegraphers on all the roads will be ordered out. Dolphin says the executive board will meet to take action on the matter as soon as the feelings of the men on the various systems are ascertained. The crucial day of the tleup on the Union Pacific is not far distant. While the situation west of Cheyenne has not changed materially in the past twenty-four hours, the congestion seems to be growing and the officials lo not look hopefully on the raising of the blockade without a conflict. Marshals Nat Brigham of Utah and McIntyre of Wyoming have united in a demand for troops to assist their deputy marshals in protecting the property of the Union Pacific in the hands of the United States courts, and so imperative has been the demand that Judge John A. Riner of the district of Wyoming came in from Greene, Ia., yesterday and left last evening for Wyoming, where he will take active steps toward helping to lift the blockade.

General Manager Dickinson, Superintend-ent of Telegraph Korty and Car Accountant Buckingham instead of waiting to receive messages from the west took possession of the telegraph office in the headquarters build-ing and were in direct communication with Superintendent Bancroft and Division Superintendent Molloy.

After receiving information as to the number of deputies under the command of Mar-shal Brigham the general manager decided to attempt the moving of some of the block-aded trains at Ogden. In the meantime they are waiting for the arrival of troops from Fort Douglas, Salt Lake City, which, it is understood, have been or-dered to Ogden to see that law and order are

The situation on the Nebraska division of the Omaha line was a little more encourag-ing today, train No. 4 having been sent out almost on time, while No. 2 went out at 12:15 p. m. No. 21, known as the St. Paul limited, arrived twenty minutes late. For the first time in four days the Omaha people managed to get out freight train No. 16, which seems to indicate that the blockade is lifted at this point. ASK FOR REINSTATEMENT. A committee from the striking firemen out on the Nebraska division of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha held a conference with Superintendent Jaynes yesterday morn-ing and asked for reinstatement on the ground that Grand Chief Sargeant had telegraphed them that no strike had been ordered on the Nebraska division, the zeal of a local chief, who is also a member of the A. R. U., at Sloux City having ordered them out. Mr. Jaynes indicated to them that other firemen were filling their places, but he would take the matter up with the general manager. As a result of the increased traffic on the Omaha the switchmen laid off Tuesday by reason of and things about the Webster street depot began to assume an everyday appearance.

The report received by telegraph of the burning of the Omaha bridge across the Floyd river, near Sloux City, proves to have spanning a deep gulch near the Omaha bridge, but was extinguished before any great amount of damage had been done. The Omaha bridge across the Floyd river is entirely built of iron, and it would be almost impossible to destroy it by fire. RESUMING ON OTHER ROADS. The Rock Island begins to show signs of returning traffic, trains 5 and 3 arriving yesterday from the east about two hours late. Trains Nos. 4 and 2 were sent east on been incorrect. At 1:30 yesterday morning fire was discovered on the Illinois Central bridge

Trains Nos. 4 and 2 were sent east on time, and the management state that hereafter the service will grow better daily.

The Wabash continues to be badly tied up, information having been given out that trains would run as far as Pattonsburg, Mo., 144 miles from Omaha. Beyond this point nothing could be promised. The Milwaukee and Burlington continue to leave and arrive on time, while the North-western has its local service in good shape.

An official of one of the roads received the following telegram from Denver, which shows the situation there: "The situation this morning looks a little brighter. The Gulf people have taken very vigorous steps toward operating their road, and they are toward operating their road, and they are having fair success. They were arresting all employes who refuse to work and employing new men. They are also arresting at Pueblo and Trinidad all men known to have taken part in disarming deputies down there a few days ago, and it is having good effect. The Denver & Rio Grande railway is tied up completely work of Pueblo. pletely west of Pueblo."

federal authorities in Omaha are still quietly watching the situation, but none of them see any immediate prospect of local trouble. Marshal White merely laughed when some one called his attention to the Associated press dispatch from Washington which intimated that he was experiencing some difficulty in serving processes. Inasmuch as the marshal has as yet not been called upon to serve a process in connection with the strike, it is certain that the disin question referred to some other marshal Chief Clerk Vandervoort of the railway mail service, stated yesterday that as yet the only difficulty with the mails with the service was with the roads some distance from Omaha. Everything on the Union Pacific is tied up west of Cheyenne, but the company is sending out its trains as usual on this end of the road. Some difficulty is experienced in securing the necessary com-plement of cars to send all regular trains west, as those that do go in that direction lo not come back. TRAIN STOPPED AT LARAMIE. After a long consultation among the Union Pacific officials, Superintendent Molloy was notified to make an attempt to get a passenger train west from Cheyenne, and ac-cordingly at 2:55 p. m. the train left the depot enroute to Laramie, having on board accumulated and blockaded business of the past three days. The train, on reach-Laramie, was stopped by the strikers, who, intimidating the engineer and fireman, drove them from the engine. After doing this the mob cut the air couplings between the Pullmans and the passenger coaches the Pullmans and the passenger and pushed the former back into the yards, ng to allow the crew to proceed with the train.

Julge Kelly of the Union Pacific law de-partment, in talking of the matter of restrain-ing orders, said: "The order issued by ing orders, said: "The order issued by Judge Dundy and confirmed by Judges Cald-well and Sanbern regarding the question of a strike is confidence." of a strike is sufficient for us. It was broad and judicial in tone and comprehends this situation exactly. While we might ask the several courts to issue restraining orders under the interstate commerce act, we have thought it entirely unnecessary. Of course this course was necessary with reads not in the hands of receivers, but with us, under the direct control of the court, we feel that th original order in the premises will hold for some time to come."

As to the rumor that the Hannibal & St. Joe was tied up, General Manager W. C. Brown of that company at Kansas City telegraphed General Manager Holdrege of the Burlington that the Hannibal & St. Joe switchmen at Kansas City had gone out, out the road was still able to do business. This does not interfere in any way with the Burlington's Kansas City business, trains from here leaving as usual.

On the Omaha the officials predict that the war is at an end and that today trains will begin running on regular time between this city and St. Paul, unless some unlooked for complications should arise within the next twelve hours. Last night the Sloux City train was sent out on time, closely folowed by a freight, with the intention of running both into Sloux City. This morning the regular St. Paul and Minneapolis express pulled out, with the intenti pushing through to the terminal of the road.

Great Western Men Still Out. DES MOINES, July 5 .- Superintendent Egan of the Chicago Great Western held a conference with the employes tonight. He gave them an opportunity to return to work, which they refused to accept. He said the road would try and get along without them. The local A. R. U. received a telegram from Chicago saying: "The situation is encouraging; each hour adds new strength to our position."
